1. Manager Referral for Counselling (EAP)

As a manager, you may sometimes notice that a team member is:

- Under a lot of stress
- Struggling emotionally
- Showing sudden changes in behaviour or performance
- Going through personal difficulties

In such cases, you can recommend EAP counselling as a support option.

2. How should managers position it?

Approach the conversation with care and empathy

Focus on well-being, not performance alone

Make it clear that this is support, not a disciplinary action

Example Conversation Starter : “I’ve noticed you seem under a lot of pressure lately. We have a confidential counselling service through EAP that many employees find helpful. Would you like to explore that option?”

3. Important things to remember

EAP is voluntary — the employee chooses whether to use it

Managers cannot force counselling

Conversations and sessions are completely confidential

Managers will not receive any details of the discussion

4. What is the manager’s role?

Encourage the employee to seek help and create a supportive environment

Share EAP contact details

Continue to manage work expectations appropriately

1. What does a manager do if they want to refer an employee for counselling?

There might be instances, where the manager/HR would want to refer an employee for a counseling session. Hence, in such cases, the manager/HR has to update the details in the manager referral form & email it to managersupport@1to1help.net.

2. What are the details required to be updated in the Manager referral form?

Below information must be shared/updated in the Manager referral form.

1. Name of company:
2. Employee's name:
3. Employee's phone number:
4. Employee's official email ID:

The team will be first connecting with the referring manager (whose details are shared in the form) to understand the reason for referral in more detail. Post that, the referred employee will be reached out and a session will be fixed as per their availability.

Clear verbal consent of the employee for counseling is crucial to the process. This means that the employee should be aware that they are being referred for these services and are also willing to seek the support of the EAP.

4. What is the turnaround time for any referral to be actioned upon?

The team initiates the process on the same day as the referral request is received, i.e., between 9 am and 9 pm (all days).
